Music lovers in Western New York may want to celebrate Three Kings Day this year with a little world beat sound and dance—and they will have the opportunity at Albright-Knox Art Gallery, 1285 Elmwood Ave.

The music and dance group One World Tribe will present a free concert at the Elmwood Avenue gallery from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Jan. 6. The concert is a collaboration between the art gallery and Young Audiences of Western New York, a nonprofit arts organization that promotes the arts and cultural in school-age populations in the region.

The Albright-Knox presents the event as part of its “M&T First Fridays at the Gallery” series. M&T Bank pays admission to the gallery and covers the cost of activities and experiences for the general public on the first Friday of every month.

One World Tribe is a music and dancing show that includes funk, Latin and world beat sounds. It was started in 1994 in Pennsylvania, and includes performers from Africa, Jamaica and Puerto Rico.
